The Center for Global Communication Studies at the Annenberg School for Communications, the #1 communication's school in the United States, at the University of Pennsylvania is offering Chinese phds and young faculty members with the opportunity to study for a year in beautiful Philadelphia.

The visiting scholar program at Annenberg/CGCS provides an opportunity for researchers and young faculty members to have dedicated time to focus on their research but also to interact with the Annenberg and Penn community.

Scholars are expected to interact with Annenberg faculty and students, attend events and colloquia at the Annenberg School (and classes if they so desire), present their research at a small lunchtime discussion with faculty and students, and produce a short research paper as a result of their stay.

All applicants should have excellent English ability by the time of their stay.

If you are interested in applying to the visiting scholars program for 2013/2014, please visit <http://www.global.asc.upenn.edu/> or email lsh@asc.upenn.edu for more information.
